

Goose Fair tram disruption looms.

Nottingham's tram workers have had enough of low pay and disrespect, says GMB.

GMB Union has today announced that workers on Nottingham's tram network have voted overwhelmingly for strike action.

Strike action will coincide with Nottingham's annual Goose Fair, due to take place later this month.

Around 200 workers are expected to join strike action, across the network's drivers, ticket office staff and maintenance teams.

88% of workers across the network backed strike action, with strike dates set to start from Saturday 26 September 2026.

Colin Whyatt, GMB Regional Organiser, said;

"GMB members have been left with few options, as Nottingham's tram bosses point blank refused to listen to their own workforce

"Goose Fair is peak time for our tram network, with tens of thousands set to descend on Nottingham for the weeklong celebration.

"Our door is always open, but tram bosses are fast running out of track to get this fixed".
