

PM missing in action during gas crisis

Once again this Prime Minister swans off on jollies as workers desperately worried

GMB has criticised the Prime Minister for going on holiday while the country is in the grip of an energy crisis.

The union has warned of tens of thousands of manufacturing jobs are at risk if the Government fails to act on rocketing energy prices.

Gary Smith, GMB General Secretary, said:

“Once again this Prime Minister has swanned off on his jollies while the country is in the grip of a crisis.

“Industry is on the brink of collapse, while our members are desperately concerned their jobs are about to go down the pan.

“While working people worry about how they are going to pay the bills, the Prime Minister is relaxing in a luxury villa – missing in action once more.”
