

End Fire and Rehire

19 Jul 2021

The GMB dispute at British Gas has brought national attention to fire and rehire but unfortunately, it's still spreading. Lots of workers have faced threats of sacking by an employer trying to force them onto a worse contract.

Since lockdown, things have gotten much worse.

In other countries, such as Ireland and Spain, it's illegal for an employer to sack an employee to force them onto a worse contract.

But it isn't illegal in the UK. We think this needs to change.

You can help in our campaign to end fire and rehire. Use our tools below to write to your local MP and councillor and help us change the law.

We're asking politicians across the UK to sign our End Fire and Rehire pledge:

“No worker should be sacked by employers trying to force them onto a worse contract. Until fire and rehire is outlawed, I pledge to remember the sacked and fight to change the law.”

Are you interested in fighting to End Fire and Rehire in your workplace? View the full End Fire and Rehire charter here.

If you'd like to show your support for our campaign and help remember those who've been sacked follow the link and order some of our brilliant End Fire and Rehire merchandise: endfireandrehire.org.uk

Help us change the law. Encourage your friends, family and colleagues to get involved by using the buttons below

